

2024 ANNUAL REPORT

The Michigan Theatre, the last and largest theatre built in downtown Jackson, opened April 30, 1930. It was built for the mainstream popular entertainment of the day—vaudeville and movies. For just pennies, the public was treated like royalty as it passed under a glittering marquee.

Most Jackson residents remember seeing their first movie in this theatre.

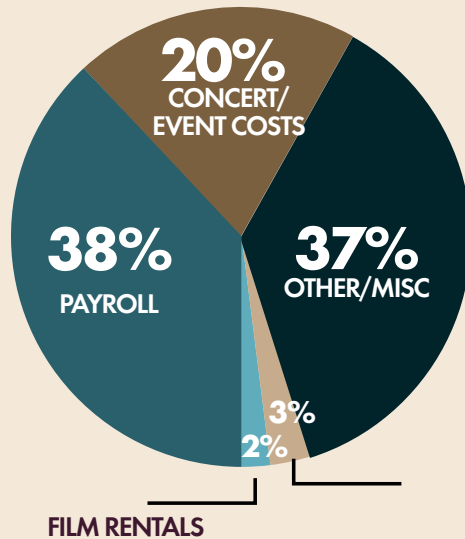

They remember fondly entering through the massive doors, gliding up the incline to the theatre lobby, smelling the popcorn, and seeing the vast interior of The Michigan Theatre.

Suddenly, they were transported through time to a familiar, yet comfortable place in history.

Under new ownership since 1993, The Michigan Theatre has become a major attraction for the region, committed to providing the area with today's entertainment in an incredible and awe-inspiring historic venue.
